

Greetings,

I'm interested in challenging, complex projects that support accountability, responsibility, and greater information transparency. I work with mission-driven organizations to support a fair and just society. I first learned how to code HTML in 1999, launched my web consulting practice in 2004, and have been continuously working to build products and services that make a positive difference. Core competencies:

- advisor - technical advice to non-technical people for new projects, sold one project
- director of digital products - develops roadmap and shares workflow for creating new digital products
- strategic integrator - understands and aligns needs of client, partners, internal team, technology resource people and products, and policy/content managers in order to support a successful outcome
- engineering manager - manages workflow for groups of 3-7
- data architect - responsible for database requirements (in conjunction with client), user pathways, database design, optimization, and modeling, and "big-picture" thinking about how client requests convert to actionable items from engineering team
- project lead - communicative, patient, timeline-oriented, manages teams, leads scrums
- product manager - functional specifications, wireframes, user pathways, analytics and reports
- full stack developer - PHP/mysql since 2001, Drupal since 2008, Agile/scrum since 2012

My routine typically includes

- A) deep discussion re: client's requests, as well as explaining/understanding client / organizational needs
- B) specifying functionality and architecture: clarifying what can be done and suggesting solutions
- C) managing: directing flow of scrums, specifying tickets, reviewing work, sign-off on incremental builds
- D) producing: implementation / wireframing / database architecture / MVP creation
- E) communicating: presenting results, sharing analytics, supporting team and clients

Career highlights:

- June 2016 - March 2017: Development director for redesign of GreenAmerica.org ($215k Drupal 8)
- January - April 2016: Database architect and engineering lead for redesign of GistNetwork.org, a US Department of State-funded entrepreneurship challenge for international participants ($310k Drupal 7)
- 2015-2016: Delivered a Drupal 7 redesign for changemakers.com, which reaches 85,000 monthly users in the field of global social enterprise and has allocated Corporate Social Responsibility monies to innovators worldwide using the "competition" model ($180k Drupal 7)
- 2004-2014: Principal producer, delivered 240+ websites over 10+ years of working with public agencies, membership groups, and businesses to move their web properties online (Drupal 6 and 7)
- 2012: As a founder, I built and sold a blog for success-oriented women (Drupal 6)
- 2010: As a co-founder, I launched an e-commerce store for home & fashion accessories (Drupal 6)
- 2000: Policy analyst as part of a project to evaluate all community-based organizations serving children, youth, families for the City and County of San Francisco ($750k)
- 2001: I was part of the core team that launched the Odyssey Internet Treks by leading a pilot Mexico visit, traveling worldwide for 18 months, and creating educational content via online delivery
- I've written three trade books on building community through website engagement strategies, and I also blog, post articles, and speak on panels, videos, and podcasts

I am always interested in connecting over your current needs and look forward to supporting or advising people who are working to create a socially just, environmentally sustainable, equitable society.
